IMPORTANT DETAILS IN EXPOSITORY TEXT

Expository text is a text that provides facts and educationally explains ideas. It is typically found in newspapers, instructional manuals, encyclopedias, cookbooks, and other resources that provide us with information.

What's In

Directions: Read the expository text and answer the questions below. Write your answer on a separate sheet

The Dolphins

Dolphins are highly social animals. But are dolphins' fish? No. Dolphins are mammals just like me and you. Dolphins breathe air, give birth to baby dolphins, also known as calves, nurse their babies with milk, and have hair at some point in their life. They have a constant body temperature, which means they're warm blooded animal.

Unlike fish, which are non-mammalian animals, dolphins do not possess gills, so they must come to the surface of the water to breathe. The blowhole on top of their head acts as a "nose", making it easy for the dolphin to surface for catching breath.

1. What is the text mainly about?
A. The dog                      B. The Dolphins                      C. The Fish
2. What kind of animals are dolphins?
A. fish                              B. mammal                              C. birds
3. What does the text give us?
A. Information                      B. Entertainment                      C. poetry

What's New

Directions: Read and underline the important details in the paragraph. Write your answer on a separate sheet.

Ginny has her birthday party today! Her friends come to her house. They bring gifts. Ginny and her friends wear party hats. They eat cake. They play games and have fun.
